Brian C. Moraes, DO, FASPC

Dr. Moraes has always been drawn to the DO (Doctor of Osteopathy) approach of treating the body as a whole entity. After medical school, he completed an Internal Medicine residency at Tulane University where he trained at the legendary Charity Hospital. Dr. Moraes stayed on to complete a fellowship in Nephrology and Hypertension. Upon finishing his training, he moved back to South Florida where he grew up and opened his own private practice.

It took years and plenty of “thinking outside the box” to develop the protocols that make up his practice. Dr. Moraes’ underlying guiding principle has always been that less medication equals better quality of life. Today, his practice has patients who travel from all over the country just for their medical care.

In his spare time, Dr. Moraes enjoys reading, listening to eclectic music, and is a big fan of art-house and foreign films. He has found ways to incorporate a multitude of these diverse interests into “the art of medicine”.

Meet Deanna Weilbacher, PA-C

Deanna had a passion for the medical field from a young age. After graduating from Elmhurst College in Chicago, she went to PA school at South University in Tampa, Florida. She enjoyed treating every aspect of a patient’s health as opposed to focusing on a single area. She has experience at a primary care office in Clearwater, FL, and she later worked at a primary care clinic in Delray Beach that largely focused on mental health and substance abuse.

Deanna began working with Dr. Moraes soon after, and she knew immediately that she found a kindred spirit who practiced the type of medicine that she had envisioned from the start of her career. Together they have put together protocols that combine traditional medicine, integrative medicine, nutrition, physical fitness, and a strong focus on quality of life. Their practice, as it is today, would never exist if it were not for Deanna’s enthusiasm, knowledge, and talents.

Wellness tips

The most valuable thing I can give to my patients is my time, and this program enables me to spend significantly more time with them that I wouldn't have otherwise.

–Dr. Moraes

I want to know my patients on a personal level, and having the extra time to do so allows me to provide them with better care.
